Democratic Members Declare the President's Speech Should Prove Pleasing to "Reactionaries"—Insurgent Republican Leader Finds Little in It to Please the Country. Review of the Message.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Congressional leaders declare that President Coolidge's message to congress was a clear-cut definition of the policies upon which he intends to conduct his administration and the issues upon which he will make a bid to the country for the Republican nomination for president.

It endorsed American entrance into the world court, but opposed the soldier bonus, which is favored by all his supporters in the congress. It urged no tinkering with railroad rates, as demanded by farmer members, opposed recognition of Russia, urged stronger measures for national defense, adoption of the Mellon tax reduction plan, opposed cancellation of the foreign debts, and demanded selective immigration to keep out classes of aliens incapable of assimilation.

The speech also advocated enactment of a measure to prevent lynchings, sale of the Muscle Shoals power plant which is desired by Henry Ford, the creation of a department of education in the cabinet, and cessation of government interference in the coal industry.

Republicans generally applauded the message, insurgent progressives were silent, while the Democrats gave their applause only to the endorsement of the world court proposal, which is the nearest they hope to get to the Wilson plan for a league of nations. The president's declaration that the United States will not join the league was loudly applauded by the Republican members. The greatest amount of applause was given to the declarations in favor of preparedness, restricted immigration and care of the veterans.

As Solons See It.

Comment from members of congress follows:

Representative Nicholas Longworth of Ohio, Republican leader: "It was a message of very great clarity, presenting a constructive legislative program to which congress ought to give immediate attention."

Representative John M. Nelson of Wisconsin, leader of the Republican insurgents: "I find little in it that will please the country."

Representative Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, chairman of the Democrats caucus: "The message gave us to understand that the tariff, the most important of all issues in the next campaign, will not be revised by congress, but that changes that may be desired will be made by the president in his own way."

Senator Smoot (Rep., Utah)—"The message should assure the American people that they have a safe, sane and wise president at the head of the nation."

Senator Capper (Rep., Kan.)—"I think the president should have gone further on the transportation question. I do not agree with him as to all provisions of the Mellon plan. Neither do I agree with him on the bonus, but I am with him with respect to the world court, provided it has nothing to do with the league."

Senator Robinson (Dem., Ark.)—"The president's opposition to adjustment compensation is frankly expressed and this subject will provoke a decisive contest."

Senator Harrison (Dem., Miss.)—"It ought to be very pleasing to all reactionaries and condemned by all progressives."

Senator Lodge (Rep., Mass.)—"The president states his position on all important questions with the utmost directness and in the clearest and simplest way. I think it is a very strong message."

Senator Dill (Dem., Wash.)—"The message places the president at the head of the standpat, reactionary forces of the country. Progressives must look elsewhere for leadership."

Cleveland, Dec. 7.—John Johnson, paper bag bandit, was given a 20-year sentence here. He was captured after he had held up a real estate office, ordering its occupants to drop their money into a paper bag. He confessed, police say, to eight recent robberies. He pleaded guilty to a dictum charging robbery.

FOUND UNCONSCIOUS

Tennessee Kidnaped From Woman's Apartment and Beaten Up.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—Mysteriously kidnaped from the apartment of Miss Marie Skelton, Tennessee beauty, W. Thompson Allen, formerly of Nashville, was found unconscious on the outskirts of Chicago. Allen is a chemical engineer. He had been severely beaten by four men, who, he said, had forced their entrance into Miss Skelton's apartment, where he was visiting. The men posed as detectives, he said. After questioning him for five hours they forced him to accompany them in a curtained automobile, where they beat him insensibly. The men were well acquainted with his family matters, he said, and questioned him about his brother, "Morton."

Miss Skelton, who is 23 years old, and also a native of Nashville, the authorities declare, holds the key to the attack. She was named in the divorce suit filed against Allen in the Tennessee court, they declared. Both came to Chicago recently.

GIRL IN THE CASE MAKES CONFESSION

Alleged Accomplice of Sailstad in Ghoully Job.

Napa, Cal., Dec. 7.—Dorothy Anderson is the "girl" in the strange case of Edward J. Sailstad. He was arrested here for an alleged insurance fraud in Wisconsin.

According to his reputed confession, he had placed the body of a dead man in a cottage, then burned the building so the authorities would believe he had lost his life in the fire and his wife and two children, whom he deserted, would collect his $60,000 life insurance.

Dorothy, according to her story, was an accomplice to the crime. She said she sat in Sailstad's room while he dug up the body of Allen McPhee, cased it in a canvas brought for the purpose and dragged it across a road to a gravel pit, in which it was concealed until the friendly darkness of another night permitted the conclusion of their plan. "I didn't help him dig the grave, but I did help him put the body into the car. That is when we hid it the night before we took it to the cottage."

In his cell at the county jail, Sailstad was just as loyal to his "sunshine girl." He implicated her only after he had been confronted with unmistakable evidence gathered in Wisconsin. But he tried in vain to shield her and shouldered all the blame himself. The girl would not have it that way, however.

Mistake Defeats Ford.

Detroit, Dec. 7.—Accidental substitution of the word "draft" for "draft" caused Henry Ford's defeat in the South Dakota primary, leaders of the Ford presidential movement declared here. An operator's mistake made in a telegram to Ford leaders in South Dakota read: "We will draft Mr. Ford," instead of "We will draft Mr. Ford." William T. Kronberg, secretary of allied Ford for President clubs, asserted.

Poincare Sustained.

Paris, Dec. 7.—The chamber of deputies adopted a vote of confidence in the cabinet of Premier Poincare in connection with the electoral laws. The vote was 408 to 127.

SEEK REVISION OF HOUSE RULES

Democratic Members Definitely Jump Into the Fight.

CRISP DRAWS UP PROPOSAL

Would Discharge Committee From Further Consideration of Bill Which It Is Trying to Smother and to Force Measure Before House For Consideration—Liberalization of Rules Seems Certain.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Liberalization of rules of the house appears to be assured.

The Democrats jumped definitely into the fight with a plan that is so closely in line with the ideas of the insurgent Republicans that it will have their support, or in any event lead to a compromise backed by these two elements.

The insurgents and Democrats voting together would have a clear working majority to put through any measure. The insurgents demonstrated that they have the unquestioned balance of power when they prevented organization of the house until given positive assurances that an opportunity would be afforded to revise rules.

The Democratic proposal was drawn and introduced by Representative Charles R. Crisp of Georgia. He has hit upon a simple and direct way to discharge a committee from further consideration of a bill or resolution which it is trying to smother and to force the measure upon the floor for consideration. Much of the complaint against the rules has arisen from the ability of committee chairmen, often exercised, to hold up bills in the face of the indisputable emergency to have them acted upon.

Under the old rules there is a provision for discharging committees, but it is practically unworkable. It provides that on the first and third Mondays of each month, after the journal is read, the unanimous consent calendar shall be in order. When business on this calendar is disposed of, the speaker can recognize as many members as he may desire to move to suspend the rules for consideration of bills and resolutions. It then becomes in order to move for the discharge of a committee which is refusing to report out a bill.

Under this plan the day always ends before there is time to reach motions to discharge committees. Crisp's plan would make these motions in order immediately after the reading of the journal on the first and third Mondays and also on the last six days of each session. This would give the whole day, if necessary, to consideration of such motions.

The Crisp proposal went to the rules committee to be considered in the general revision of the rules promised the insurgents. If the committee fails to embody it in its recommendations, the Democrats and insurgents will renew the fight on the floor.

SLAYER PAYS PENALTY

Dies in Electric Chair For Murder of a Trumbull County Farmer.

Columbus, Dec. 7.—John Karayians, 34, of Warren, O., was electrocuted at the Ohio penitentiary at an early hour today for the murder of Charles Gamble, farmer, near Warren, after Gamble and an officer had attempted to arrest Karayians for the theft of corn from Gamble's property. Karayians resisted and shot the officer and Gamble, the latter dying, while the officer suffered paralysis from the effects of the bullet, which penetrated his body near the spine.

The prisoner was sentenced to die Oct. 15, 1922, but was given a definite stay of execution. Former Governor Davis on Oct. 20, 1922, gave Karayians a five-day stay of execution. In February, 1923, the prisoner was granted a new trial by the court of appeals. The prosecution carried this decision to the supreme court, which reversed the decision of the court of appeals and reaffirmed the decision of the common pleas court, placing the day of execution on Dec. 7.

Karayians claimed that he had a wife and daughter, aged 11, both living in Greece. He came from that country several years before being convicted of the crime.

VERA CRUZ SEIZED BY REBELS

Unfurl Banner of Revolt in Favor of De La Huerta.

MOVE SPREADS LIKE WILDFIRE

Garrisons in Several Mexican States Join the Uprising Against President Obregon—Rail Communication Cut Between Capital and Vera Cruz. De la Huerta and Followers Forced to Leave Mexico City.

Mexico City, Dec. 7.—Mexican politics again have brought about a revolution.

General Guadalupe Sanchez unfurled the banner of revolt in favor of Adolfo de la Huerta when he marched troops into the city of Vera Cruz, took possession and placed an embargo on the port of Vera Cruz.

General Sanchez, addressing the troops, declared against an attempt to force General Plutarco Elias Calles upon the people of the republic as his successor for the presidency.

Immediately after the speech by General Sanchez the troops swore to adhere to the candidacy of Huerta, in which they were followed by the populace of the entire city.

De la Huerta has been forced to leave Mexico City secretly because of threat of death and is accompanied by numerous followers, including many senators and members of the chamber of deputies.

Shortly after the taking of the city the commander in charge of the Mexican navy at the port of Vera Cruz (the forces consisting of two gunboats and 10 eagle boats purchased from the United States) sent for General Sanchez and announced that he was ready to join the revolt against the central government. He declared that he was placing himself under the orders of General Sanchez.

Authentic information has reached the capital that the revolt is spreading like wildfire throughout the republic in favor of De la Huerta. General Julio Cardenas, commander of the federal forces in the state of Michoacan, with the troops under him, has turned against President Obregon. A similar situation exists in the state of Jalisco. Word is hourly expected that the governor of the state of Tamaulipas, in which the famous Tampico oil fields are located, has declared in favor of the revolt.

Word comes from the state of Guerrero, where General Romulo Figueroa last week began his revolt, that General Urbalejo, famous Yaqui chief, who was sent to quell the revolt of Figueroa, had joined forces with the rebels and is now occupying Chilpancingo, capital of the state.

On the heels of these developments comes the report that the federal garrison stationed at the border of port of Ojinaga, in the state of Chihuahua, Villa's old stamping ground, has declared for Huerta and turned against Obregon. All railway communication between Mexico City and Vera Cruz has been discontinued from Apizaco east.

RAIL EARNINGS SHORT

Unprecedented Volume of Traffic Handled, Report Shows.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Although the railroads of the country handled more freight traffic during the first nine months of 1923 than any previous corresponding period, the reported earnings probably will not amount to more than 5% per cent on the face value of the property, it was stated in the annual report of the interstate commerce commission.

Features in the report were: The unprecedented volume of traffic handled; the concurrent transformation of a car shortage to a surplus; equitable distribution of available equipment.

The transportation record was made possible by the condition of power and cars, new locomotives and cars placed in service and increases in mileage per car per day and loading of equipment, the report said. The net railway operating income for the year 1923 will approximate $1,000,000,000, the report said.

Crabbe Announces Ruling.

Columbus, Dec. 7.—General provisions of the workmen's compensation amendment adopted at the November election are not self-executing and the industrial commission has no authority to spend any of the $100,000 fund provided for investigation and prevention of accidents until new laws are enacted, Attorney General Crabbe ruled.

CHARGES AGAINST ATTORNEY

Disbarment Proceedings Recommended by Bar Committee.

Columbus, Dec. 7.—Disbarment proceedings against Lemuel D. Lilly, attorney, is recommended in a report of a committee of the Franklin county bar filed in common pleas court here. The committee was named last July, when it was disclosed that there had been irregularities in connection with handling of funds of Ohio Wesleyan university, whose trustees Lilly represented as counsel many years. Others alleged to have lost money through transactions involving the attorney are the Methodist Children's Home association of Ohio, Methodist ministers and a retired missionary.

The bar committee sets forth in its report that its information is to the effect that the money was lost through speculations carried on without approval of the losers and through other irregularities. It is said that Lilly has turned over his personal estate toward satisfaction of the delinquent accounts, said to run into thousands of dollars. The discrepancy in connection with Ohio Wesleyan university funds is said to be at least $15,000.

LIBERALS MAKE GAINS

Conservatives Lose Many Seats, Election Returns Show.

London, Dec. 7.—Election returns completed thus far indicate the seating of 109 Conservatives, 73 Laborites and 61 Liberals. The Tories have gained three new seats and lost 40, while the Liberals have gained 39 and lost 13. Labor has gained 23 seats and lost nine.

Former Premier Herbert Asquith is certainly elected from Paisley, Sir Alfred Mond was defeated in Swansea and Edwin Scrymgeour, prohibitionist, was re-elected from Dundee. Lady Astor was returned from Plymouth by a reduced plurality. About 350 seats are still in doubt.

Returns indicate a triumph for free trade, with the Liberals making the best showing.

The outstanding feature of the elections was the defeat of Winston Churchill, who lost heavily in Leicester. Sir Montagu Barlow, minister of labor, was defeated by the Labor candidate in South Salford.

Family Poisoned.

Cleveland, Dec. 7.—Death of an 8-year-old boy here resulted from the ptomaine poisoning of the family of John Vanaka. Hospital authorities say the poisoning was due either to canned meat or canned sauerkraut.

He was unable to finance the subway project.

Prisoner's Injuries Fatal.

Columbus, Dec. 7.—Harry Wilson, 32, Cleveland convict, who leaped from the window of the idle house at the penitentiary, died at the prison hospital from his injuries. Just before his death, Wilson regained consciousness and said he was prompted to take his life because of the "unfair sentence" he had received. "The sentence was too severe for the crime I committed," he said. He was serving 10 to 15 years for assault with intent to kill.

Two Suspects Ordered Held.

Youngstown, O., Dec. 7.—Vasil Bogdan and Ironin Sirbu were ordered held for alleged murder in connection with the death of Dr. S. E. Conrad, Salem dry agent, stabbed and mortally wounded here several weeks ago during a liquor raid, by the verdict of Coroner Hays. Both Bogdan and Sirbu denied the charge when arrested and were freed on bail of $2,000 each, pending result of Conrad's injuries.

Escaped Prisoners Found.

Lima, O., Dec. 7.—Harry Shaw and Bill Murray, who escaped from the hospital for the criminal insane here last August, were found by police in a cave in the hills near South Connelville, Pa. Officers found the cave fully equipped, divided into two rooms, furnished with beds, a stove and cooking utensils. Three revolvers, burglar tools and stolen merchandise was also found by the police.

Given Life Sentence.

West Union, O., Dec. 7.—John Spires, convicted of first degree murder of Robert F. Morris, former Cincinnati, was sentenced to life imprisonment. Frank Moore and Frank Jenkins, both of West Union, whom Spires had accused, were freed. Morris was slain in June and his body was buried near the banks of a creek, where it was found.

To Present Under Case.

Toledo, Dec. 7.—The case against Mayor Adolph Unger of Tiffin for alleged conspiracy to violate the national prohibition laws will be presented to the federal grand jury here, according to United States District Attorney George Reed. Affidavits against Unger were sworn out some time ago by several Tiffin residents.

Riot Victim Recompensed.

Steubenville, O., Dec. 7.—B. Blyholder of Massillon, who sought $1,000 damages from Jefferson county commissioners for personal injuries sustained during the anti-klan riot on the streets of this city last August, has been awarded $300.

Girl's Skull Fractured.

Lewistown, O., Dec. 7.—Miss Thelma Reams, 19, is in a critical condition as the result of an automobile accident near West Liberty. She suffered a fractured skull.

Bandits Use Adhesive Tape.

Cleveland, Dec. 7.—Bandits bound Abraham Akers and a clerk and sealed their mouths shut with adhesive tape, then looted Akers' store of $500 worth of merchandise.

VERA CRUZ SEIZED BY REBELS

Unfurl Banner of Revolt in Favor of De La Huerta.

MOVE SPREADS LIKE WILDFIRE

Garrisons in Several Mexican States Join the Uprising Against President Obregon—Rail Communication Cut Between Capital and Vera Cruz. De la Huerta and Followers Forced to Leave Mexico City.

Mexico City, Dec. 7.—Mexican politics again have brought about a revolution.

General Guadalupe Sanchez unfurled the banner of revolt in favor of Adolfo de la Huerta when he marched troops into the city of Vera Cruz, took possession and placed an embargo on the port of Vera Cruz.

General Sanchez, addressing the troops, declared against an attempt to force General Plutarco Elias Calles upon the people of the republic as his successor for the presidency.

Immediately after the speech by General Sanchez the troops swore to adhere to the candidacy of Huerta, in which they were followed by the populace of the entire city.

De la Huerta has been forced to leave Mexico City secretly because of threat of death and is accompanied by numerous followers, including many senators and members of the chamber of deputies.

Shortly after the taking of the city the commander in charge of the Mexican navy at the port of Vera Cruz (the forces consisting of two gunboats and 10 eagle boats purchased from the United States) sent for General Sanchez and announced that he was ready to join the revolt against the central government. He declared that he was placing himself under the orders of General Sanchez.

Authentic information has reached the capital that the revolt is spreading like wildfire throughout the republic in favor of De la Huerta. General Julio Gardenas, commander of the federal forces in the state of Michoacan, with the troops under him, has turned against President Obregon. A similar situation exists in the state of Jalisco. Word is hourly expected that the governor of the state of Tamaulipas, in which the famous Tampico oil fields are located, has declared in favor of the revolt.

Word comes from the state of Guerrero, where General Romulo Figueroa last week began his revolt, that General Urbalejo, famous Yaqui chief, who was sent to quell the revolt of Figueroa, had joined forces with the rebels and is now occupying Chilpancingo, capital of the state.

On the heels of these developments comes the report that the federal garrison stationed at the border of port of Ojinaga, in the state of Chihuahua, Villa's old stamping ground, has declared for Huerta and turned against Obregon. All railway communication between Mexico City and Vera Cruz has been discontinued from Apizaco east.

RAIL EARNINGS SHORT

Unprecedented Volume of Traffic Handled, Report Shows.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Although the railroads of the country handled more freight traffic during the first nine months of 1923 than any previous corresponding period, the reported earnings probably will not amount to more than 5% per cent on the face value of the property, it was stated in the annual report of the interstate commerce commission.

Features in the report were: The unprecedented volume of traffic handled; the concurrent transformation of a car shortage to a surplus; equitable distribution of available equipment.

The transportation record was made possible by the condition of power and cars, new locomotives and cars placed in service and increases in mileage per car per day and loading of equipment, the report said. The net railway operating income for the year 1923 will approximate $1,000,000, the report said.

Crabbe Announces Ruling.

Columbus, Dec. 7.—General provisions of the workmen's compensation amendment adopted at the November election are not self-executing and the industrial commission has no authority to spend any of the $100,000 fund provided for investigation and prevention of accidents until new laws are enacted, Attorney General Crabbe ruled.

CHARGES AGAINST ATTORNEY

Disbarment Proceedings Recommended by Bar Committee.

Columbus, Dec. 7.—Disbarment proceedings against Lemuel D. Lilly, attorney, is recommended in a report of a committee of the Franklin county bar filed in common pleas court here. The committee was named last July, when it was disclosed that there had been irregularities in connection with handling of funds of Ohio Wesleyan university, whose trustees Lilly represented as counsel many years. Others alleged to have lost money through transactions involving the attorney are the Methodist Children's Home association of Ohio, Methodist ministers and a retired missionary. The bar committee sets forth in its report that its information is to the effect that the money was lost through speculations carried on without approval of the losers and through other irregularities. It is said that Lilly has turned over his personal estate toward satisfaction of the delinquent accounts, said to run into thousands of dollars. The discrepancy in connection with Ohio Wesleyan university funds is said to be at least $15,000.

LIBERALS MAKE GAINS

Conservatives Lose Many Seats, Election Returns Show.

London, Dec. 7.—Election returns completed thus far indicate the seating of 109 Conservatives, 73 Laborites and 61 Liberals. The Tories have gained three new seats and lost 40, while the Liberals have gained 39 and lost 13. Labor has gained 23 seats and lost nine.

Former Premier Herbert Asquith is certainly elected from Paisley. Sir Alfred Mond was defeated in Swansea and Edwin Scrymgeour, prohibitionist, was re-elected from Dundee. Lady Astor was returned from Plymouth by a reduced plurality. About 350 seats are still in doubt.

Returns indicate a triumph for free trade, with the Liberals making the best showing.

The outstanding feature of the elections was the defeat of Winston Churchill, who lost heavily in Leicester. Sir Montagu Barlow, minister of labor, was defeated by the Labor candidate in South Salford.

Family Poisoned.

Cleveland, Dec. 7.—Death of an 8-year-old boy here resulted from the ptomaine poisoning of the family of John Vanaka. Hospital authorities say the poisoning was due either to canned meat or canned sauerkraut.

Criminologist Says Pickpockets
Are Taught "Trade."

The mental and physical makeup of that world-wide class of minor criminals, the pickpocket, has been set forth with convincing accuracy by the one man in Europe doubtless best qualified to do so, Dr. E. Lewisch, for 18 years chief of the pickpocket section of the Vienna police.

The chief was addressing the delegates to the international police congress. The pickpocket, he said, is essentially a nomad, a rover. He finds his prey on the street, in places of amusement, when an accident draws people together, in the cloakroom of a theater, in short, wherever there is a crowd. He may operate in Vienna today and tomorrow he is loitering about a city a hundred miles away. He must be ready to keep moving and give up any idea of a settled home. In Europe he must be a good linguist.

It is reasonably certain, Doctor Lewisch said, that these men are systematically trained in their work, and he believed the best schools are in Poland and Hungary. Beside strength and manual dexterity the pickpocket must have presence of mind, knowledge of men, and a ready adaptability to cope with unexpected and dangerous situations. Unbounded effrontery, self-confidence and a ready eloquence are important assets, and often help him to calm the agitation of his victim, avert suspicion, and even win the confidence and gratitude of the man he is robbing.

The successful pickpocket needs well-formed hands, strong and with long, narrow fingers. He must be able to seize a heavy purse with two fingers as with a pair of pliers, and extract it from a pocket by a quick and sure movement, or twist a watch ring out of its bearings with as easy a grace as if picking a flower from its stem.

In court the pickpocket denies passionately every charge brought against him. He admits absolutely nothing. He has a ready excuse to account for his presence in the city where he was caught. The stolen watch he will swear he picked up from the ground, and as an honest finder he was about to carry it to the police station. Before the judge he will simulate deafness or ignorance of the language of the court. He will fight for time by asking questions on his own account or pretend sickness or even insanity.

It takes time to build a good case against a pickpocket, Doctor Lewisch declared. He must be held while his record, often in other countries, is being looked up. He must be fingerprinted and photographed, and these evidences distributed to the police authorities all over Europe. And when he is found guilty, Doctor Lewisch concluded, give him a long sentence, preferably in the penitentiary.

Nature's Champion Bluffer.
Although the horn-toad, specimens of which have recently reached this country, is one of the most repulsive and formidable-looking of all creatures, it is in reality quite harmless. No animal is a more thorough "bluffer." It can inflate its skin to twice its normal size, presenting an appearance of extreme ferocity. When it is angry it hisses and rattles its tail, while it is further endowed with the astonishing gift of squirting blood from its eyes! Actually, however, the horn-toad is as incapable of inflicting injury as the ordinary garden frog. Its ability to emit blood from its eyes without damage to those delicate organs has lately claimed the attention of scientists, who have discovered that the toad squirts blood as a safety valve ejects steam. When the creature is disturbed its blood pressure rises, filling with blood the tiny pockets round its eyes. As the pressure increases the walls of these pockets give way, and the blood shoots forth, frightening away its enemy. The blood is slightly acid, and causes a certain amount of discomfort to the person or animal whose skin it touches. The horn-toad can squirt its blood fifteen inches, at intervals of from one to two minutes, and has been known to repulse even rattlesnakes by this extraordinary means.

True Economy.
Here's another one about the economical Scotsman:

Ten lads and ten lassies went aboard the S. S. Columbia at New York for a bon voyage party to Mary McCann, a member of the Scots colony in New York, who was sailing for Glasgow. The music struck up and the lassies stepped out in pairs to dance, but the men glumly held to their places along the rail.

"Why don't you lads dance?" "Dancin'," said John Grillee, one of the standees, "wears out yer boots."

All of It.
His wife had a cold, and could not go to church. But she insisted that he should go in her place.

"Well," she inquired on his return, "and what was the burden of the vicar's sermon?"

He sat down with a weary sigh. "All of it, my dear," he said.

The Child Satirist.
Pat (play-acting)—Have you lodgings to let?

Barbara—Excuse me, have you any parents?

Pat—Yes.
Barbara—I'm afraid we never take in children with parents.—London Punch.

Pig Worth Having.

The famous pointing sow Slut, whose history is told in the old Cyclopaedia of Sport, was a truly remarkable animal. When young she had a nose superior to most pointers, would run as well as the best and would retrieve birds that had run. When ten years old she would set game as well as ever, though naturally she had become slothful, for her weight approached seven hundred pounds.

Slut was raised in the New Forest, England, and was taken in hand for training by Thomas and Richard Toomer, her owners, when she was about eighteen months old. In the course of the first day she answered to her name; within a fortnight she would find and point partridges and rabbits. She "stood" partridges, black game, pheasants, snipe and rabbits in the same day, but was never known to point a hare. Her pace was mostly a trot; she galloped rarely and only when her master's whistle summoned her. She seemed as pleased as a dog when she was shown a gun and was delighted when game, dead or alive, was placed before her. The two Toomers lived about seven miles apart. Many times Slut went by herself from one lodge to the other, apparently hoping to be taken out shooting.

Dogs did not like to hunt with her and in consequence did not often accompany her. When she joined them by accident in the forest she would back them whenever they pointed, but they refused to back her until spoken to.

Turkeys Charm Snakes.

According to an eminent naturalist, snakes have a most peculiar effect on wild turkeys and when a snake is encountered by a flock, they behave in a most extraordinary manner. At the sight of the snake, the birds will begin to dance slowly round it. As the turkeys dance they lower their wings, raise and spread their tails and utter a continuous querulous call. Single birds will sometimes break from the revolving circle to make frantic dashes at the snake. If the snake is not too formidable the flock will probably kill it. Otherwise they will leave it dazed and deafened by their conduct and noise.

"HUMAN SONG IS GREATEST"

Writer Declares That the Angels
Pause to Listen to the Things
Worth While.

I have a very great delight in writing. It is like going swimming at sunrise, or like picking up the main-sail bunt in a moonlighted Horn gale, or like any number of things that make one's life a happy thing. I wish that I could write in such a way as to leave a blossom flowering when I sail to the last haven. One wants to do one's bit, doesn't one? asks Bill Adams.

Oh, yes. One wants to get to the very heart of no end of a hard fight and to hit fast, hard and true—going down with a light laugh if down one must go. And if victorious, lifting a fallen foe with the same laugh and the hand of friendship, eh? Isn't that so?

There really is nothing to beat a man's life, is there?

For instance—don't you suppose that when the old rusty-bowed clipper goes booming through the last sea, carrying the scarred souls of many a tough old mariner toward the wharf whose bollards are made of gold, don't you suppose now that the Great Superintendent of the Fleets will say to the angels:

"Cease your harping, boys—hold on, now steady all hands, a bit," and add, "Hush, here they come—let's listen to their rousing chantey—that's real music, boys."

Don't you rather reckon that, all said and done, the song of a human man is, through all the long years, of greater worth than harping of myriads of angels, eh?—Adventure Magazine.

When the creature is disturbed its blood pressure rises, filling with blood the tiny pockets round its eyes. As the pressure increases the walls of these pockets give way, and the blood shoots forth, frightening away its enemy.

The blood is slightly acid, and causes a certain amount of discomfort to the person or animal whose skin it touches. The horn-toad can squirt its blood fifteen inches, at intervals of from one to two minutes, and has been known to repulse even rattlesnakes by this extraordinary means.

True Economy.

Here's another one about the economical Scotsman: Ten lads and ten lassies went aboard the S. S. Columbia at New York for a bon voyage party to Mary McCann, a member of the Scots colony in New York, who was sailing for Glasgow. The music struck up and the lassies stepped out in pairs to dance, but the men glumly held to their places along the rail.

"Why don't you lads dance?"

"Dancin'," said John Grille, one of the standees, "wears out yer boots."

All of It.

His wife had a cold, and could not go to church. But she insisted that he should go in her place.

"Well," she inquired on his return, "and what was the burden of the vicar's sermon?"

He sat down with a weary sigh.

"All of it, my dear," he said.

The Child Satirist.

Pat (play-acting)—Have you lodgings to let?

Barbara—Excuse me, have you any parents?

Pat—Yes.

Barbara—I'm afraid we never take in children with parents.—London Punch.

Pig Worth Having.

The famous pointing sow Slut, whose history is told in the old Cyclopaedia of Sport, was a truly remarkable animal. When young she had a nose superior to most pointers, would run as well as the best and would retrieve birds that had run. When ten years old she would set game as well as ever, though naturally she had become slothful, for her weight approached seven hundred pounds.

Slut was raised in the New Forest, England, and was taken in hand for training by Thomas and Richard Toomer, her owners, when she was about eighteen months old. In the course of the first day she answered to her name; within a fortnight she would find and point partridges and rabbits. She "stood" partridges, black game, pheasants, snipe and rabbits in the same day, but was never known to point a hare. Her pace was mostly a trot; she galloped rarely and only when her master's whistle summoned her. She seemed as pleased as a dog when she was shown a gun and was delighted when game, dead or alive, was placed before her. The two Toomers lived about seven miles apart. Many times Slut went by herself from one lodge to the other, apparently hoping to be taken out shooting.

Dogs did not like to hunt with her and in consequence did not often accompany her. When she joined them by accident in the forest she would back them whenever they pointed, but they refused to back her until spoken to.

Turkeys Charm Snakes.

According to an eminent naturalist, snakes have a most peculiar effect on wild turkeys and when a snake is encountered by a flock, they behave in a most extraordinary manner. At the sight of the snake, the birds will begin to dance slowly round it. As the turkeys dance they lower their wings, raise and spread their tails and utter a continuous querulous call. Single birds will sometimes break from the revolving circle to make frantic dashes at the snake. If the snake is not too formidable the flock will probably kill it. Otherwise they will leave it dazed and deafened by their conduct and noise.

"HUMAN SONG IS GREATEST"

Writer Declares That the Angels
Pause to Listen to the Things
Worth While.

I have a very great delight in writing. It is like going swimming at sunrise, or like picking up the main-sail bunt in a moonlighted Horn gale, or like any number of things that make one's life a happy thing. I wish that I could write in such a way as to leave a blossom flowering when I sail to the last haven. One wants to do one's bit, doesn't one? asks Bill Adams.

Oh, yes. One wants to get to the very heart of no end of a hard fight and to hit fast, hard and true—going down with a light laugh if down one must go. And if victorious, lifting a fallen foe with the same laugh and the hand of friendship, eh? Isn't that so?

There really is nothing to beat a man's life, is there?

For instance—don't you suppose that when the old rusty-bowed clipper goes booming through the last sea, carrying the scarred souls of many a tough old mariner toward the wharf whose bollards are made of gold, don't you suppose now that the Great Superintendent of the Fleets will say to the angels:

"Cease your harping, boys—hold on, now steady all hands, a bit," and add, "Hush, here they come—let's listen to their rousing chantey—that's real music, boys."

Don't you rather reckon that, all said and done, the song of a human man is, through all the long years, of greater worth than harping of myriads of angels, eh?—Adventure Magazine.

FIND NO TRACE OF FRENCH COLONISTS

Recent Discoveries in Florida Indicate Massacre.

Bones of white men in an Indian burial mound on Miami beach and a few scant traces of an apparent French settlement near Lemon City, Fla., have aroused the speculation of citizens and scientists of Florida. The mysterious origin and fate of the settlement have given renewed interest to old legends that have survived on the Florida coast through the centuries. Edward F. Flannery, writing in the Miami Herald, describes stone steps discovered some time ago in Garden Isle Park, buried under debris. They have been carved out of the natural coral formation there. The steps lead from a lower level of ground which is at present the same level as the shore of Little river, to a higher level of ground. There four steps are carved in an artistic way entirely different from anything likely to have been constructed by Indians. Nearby in the same rock is cut an opening which evidently served as an oven.

Across Biscayne bay from this apparent site of a colony is an Indian burial mound, which contains skeletons of white men, scientists who have made a study of them assert.

Ferney W. McVeigh, on whose estate the stone steps were discovered, has concluded that a French settlement was established there late in the Fifteenth century, from a party which left St. Augustine. History shows that St. Augustine had some internal troubles at that time which resulted in the migration of discontented factions to Southern Georgia, and it is possible that some went to other parts of Florida.

Mr. McVeigh believes there existed in the vicinity of Little river a race of Indians which subsequently disappeared. They are often characterized as mound builders.

From the faint evidences remaining, some have reasoned that the Indians were about to attack the settlement, and that the women and children and older men were sent across the bay. The Indians, victorious in the battle, crossed the bay and massacred those who had fled, burying the bodies after their own customs.

Another assumption is that the colony was exterminated by pirates. Many years ago, it is said, a pirate of the Spanish Main retired to a little home in Orlando, and told his oldest son of how he and other pirates massacred a French colony near what is now Miami beach. Recent discoveries have tended to give support to this old legend.

None of the old coast legends have explained how the colony came into being. In addition to the theory that it was formed by people from St. Augustine, there is support for the conjecture that colonists from Haiti may have founded the settlement in the troublous times of Toussaint l' Overture.

WHY INDUSTRY IS MISUNDERSTOOD

Geo. E. Roberts Tells How Co-operative Character of Corporations Is Obscured.

RADICAL AGITATION RESULTS

Maintenance of Present Industrial System Necessary to Maintain Present Standards of Comfort for All the People, He Says.

The modern industrial system is at bottom a co-operative organization, but this fact is obscured by the complexity of huge enterprises, George E. Roberts, noted authority on business and finance, declared in a recent speech before the American Bankers Association Convention at Atlantic City, N. J. "The primitive man knew that the harder he worked the more he would have," Mr. Roberts said. "When a man exchanged work with a neighbor he had the whole transaction under his eyes. But when a man works with thousands of others for a great corporation he doesn't see any definite relationship between what he does and what he gets. He doesn't know whether he is getting a fair share of the industrial results or not, and he suspects not."

"The modern industrial system is essentially co-operative, but you cannot have effective co-operation without understanding. Because people do not see the industrial organization as a whole we have the tendency for society to break up into groups and blocs and unions and organizations of one kind and another, many of whom are trying to advance their own interests at the expense of society as a whole. The population of this country today could not be supported in the state of comfort to which it is accustomed without the modern, specialized organization."

Bolshevism in Russia

"The extremity of social disorganization has been seen in Russia, where has been enacted the greatest tragedy in the history of the world. What happened there will happen everywhere unless there is a development of the capacity of people to work together and understand each other."

"In its final form the revolution in Russia was against what is called the capitalistic system, or the private ownership of property and direction of industry. The results of the revolution are so calamitous in Russia as to give a check to revolutionary tendencies in other countries. Yet the economic principles of Bolshevism are influencing public opinion more or less everywhere."

"The motive behind all this agitation is the desire to establish equality. The social struggles of the past have been for political equality. Now the demand is for equality in possessions, equality in incomes, equality in the management of industrial affairs. There is no argument against the aspirations of men for better social conditions, but radical ideas result from certain economic fallacies. One relates to the employment and service of private capital. Men read about vast sums of wealth belonging to individuals, and think of these sums as devoted exclusively to the owners. In fact wealth employed in production for the public market is rendering service to the entire community, no matter who owns it."

"The whole radical argument is like claiming that nobody ever got any benefit from the development of the steam engine but the owners of steam engines. Of course, the theory only needs to be stated for the fallacy to be apparent. The man who works for wages is benefited by every investment of capital which increases and cheapens the supply of the things for which his wages are spent."

The Service of Capital

"It is a fundamental truth that all productive property, although privately owned, is part of the equipment of society, by which its wants are supplied."

"The progress of the past has been accomplished under the individualistic system. The theory of this system is that every one shall have for his own, as nearly as may be, that which results from his own efforts. It is a system calculated to stimulate the initiative, call out the energies and develop the ability of each individual. He is free as to his undertakings; there are no restrictions except that he must seek his own gains by activities that are serviceable to the community as a whole, and he is inspired to labor, not simply by the desire for personal advantage, but by the desire to provide for loved ones, by the impulse to self-expression, to realize and develop his natural abilities, and by the ambition to achieve, to win distinction and to render service."

"It does not promise equality. Unless there is equality in production, in service, in effort, in resolution and in self-denial, why should there be equality in the division of results?"

"The justification of individualism, however, is not merely in what it allows to the superior individual, but in the results that inure to all. It is in the interest of all to secure the most effective organization, the most effective management and the largest possible production. These cannot be had by adopting the fiction that all have equal ability for any position, or by any other system than that which judges men by their individual qualifications."

Paint Brush's Many Uses.

Nothing is better to take dust down the stairs than a good paint brush. It removes the dust from the corner niche of each step, brushes between the stair railings of moldings in a way no cloth can possibly do. Indeed a medium size paint brush of about four inches width has many uses in the house.

PARENT-TEACHER MEETING.

The Franklin street school Parent-Teacher association will meet Friday evening at 7 o'clock at the school building. The meeting will be addressed by Judge E. A. Brown on Juvenile work. A full attendance is desired, as matters of importance will be taken up.

Great Value of Redwood.

Redwood lumber is largely used on the Pacific coast, as it has great natural resistance to rot and fire. Heart redwood when placed in contact with the ground will remain in good condition for 25 years or more, whereas a great many other species rot out in a few years. The redwood heartwood is also able to repel the attacks of decay-producing fungi, because of the presence of tannin, oils and resins obnoxious to fungi.

SCREAM OF THE DOG FOX

Rarest and the Most Unearthly Animal Yet to Be Heard in North America.

Suddenly the stillness of a New Jersey countryside was broken by a perfectly appalling scream. Although I recognized what it was, my muscles jerked and twitched at the sound, and when it was repeated my complexion, even though a veteran naturalist, gripped me so tightly that his fingerprints showed black on my arm the next morning.

It was the scream of a fox, probably the most sinister, unearthly wild animal note that can be heard in North America. The howl of the wolf and screech of the wildcat, or bay lynx, are all weird sounds, to say nothing of the frightful shriek which the horned owl sometimes gives, but none of them begins to be as fearful as the scream of a dog fox.

Usually he barks like a dog that is just learning how, and the vixen squalls and squawks like a heron; but none of these sounds can ever be confounded with his scream, as rare and dreadful as that screech of a wounded horse which frightened even Hawkeye and Chingacgook.

A fox scream is not usually heard more than a few times in a lifetime. My first experience with the sound was on Cream hill, up in Cornwall, Conn., one dark night when I was a boy—it was several years ago.

I was passing the Half Moon lot, whose thirty acres include a number of fox dens, and just as I reached Boundary elm, a vast tree which marked the corners of four farms, I heard a fearful scream in the darkness close at hand which I instantly recognized as the screech of a black panther.

Not having with me a rifle, a tomahawk, or even the long, keen hunting knife with which all the heroes of Harry Castleman and Mayne Reid, my authorities on panthers, black and blond, were always armed, I was somewhat at a disadvantage. In fact, a hurried examination of my pockets showed no more deadly weapon than a slate pencil.

However, I did not lose my presence of mind. Realizing instantly that flight was what the emergency required, I flew. At least I do not remember touching the ground until I crossed the bridge over the brook at the foot of the hill half a mile away.

At the time I felt that it was a very narrow escape and that I probably owed my life to the cool daring with which I had met the situation. In later years, however, since I learned that my black panther was really a red fox, I have had my doubts.—Samuel Scoville in Century Magazine.

TUBERCULOSIS
Campaign to Stamp Out White Plague—
Buy Christmas Seals.
Governor Donahey in a letter to Dr. W. O. Thompson, chairman of the Ohio Christmas Seal committee has expressed his hearty approval and best wishes for the sixteenth annual Christmas Seal sale which started Saturday, December 1. The governor pointed out what the state is doing thru its health department, agricultural department and department of education to combat tuberculosis in Ohio. He also pointed out that Christmas Seals have been an important factor in this fight. In his letter to Dr. Thompson, the governor says:
"I would be glad to have you convey to all those associated with you in promoting the sixteenth annual sale of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals my earnest hope for their success this nation-wide appeal."
"The state of Ohio is vitally interested in health and particularly in combating tuberculosis which claims more than five thousand of our people annually, most of them in the prime of life. Thru the state department of health, we have been conducting clinics to discover early cases of tuberculosis; in the schools, health instruction has become a matter of first consideration and thru the state veterinarian in the department of agriculture we are carrying on a vigorous campaign to rid our state of a dangerous source of infection to childhood—tuberculosis. Our state and local sanatoriums are expanding to care for the afflicted. We are making progress as indicated by a steadily declining death rate."
"The Christmas Seals help to spread information about this nation-wide campaign, and have been an important factor in the fight. I therefore trust that there may be a generous response on the part of all the people to your appeal this year."

Is that poetry?" asked the House Detective.
"I think the guy who wrote it, did so with that idea, but I believe it is open to an argument, if you want to talk about it," said the Hotel Stenographer.
"I ain't got no truck with poetry," said the House Detective, scornfully. It is taking words and piling them in nice even rows, like a kid playing with building blocks."
"O, I dunno," said the girl. "I some times get a lot of inspiration out of poetry. I know the distance across the English Channel, and always will because a teacher once told me:
"The Straits of Dover
Are twenty miles over."
"And I don't know how anybody in the world could tell how many days there are in a month, if it wasn't for that poem about:
"Thirty days have September,
April, June and November;
All the rest are thirty, too.
Unless you make your own home brew."
"Then there is that fine poem, written by Byron, or Bryan, or somebody, about getting the jack. It goes:
"Count that day lost whose low descending sun
Sees no addition to your wad of mon'
"Seems funny to hear inspiring poems like that, Kelly, and to then remember that all these poets die hungry in a garret some place; they just pine away, unappreciated in the fifth reel.
"Seems to me if I was a poet, I would marry some nice widow lady, with a boarding house or else a first class dressmaker, who could work all day, while I just sat out in the park and rhymed 'sun' with 'mon' and 'work' with 'shirk' because these poets are temperamental people and ought to be coddled and most old-maid dressmakers are willing to coddle anything."

AMUSEMENTS
Mary Jane Irving may be only seven years old but she is a veteran screen performer. She is a member of the cast of "Cordelia the Magnificent," Harry Garson's newest production for Metro, starring Clara Kimball Young. This picture is Mary Jane's seventieth if it is to be seen Friday at the Met theater.
It may be surmised that Mary Jane received an early start in motion pictures. Her first residence was in Columbus, South Carolina, but shortly before she reached her second birthday she brought her mother to Los Angeles. A few weeks after her second birthday she made her bow in filmdom in "The Square Deal Man" starring William S. Hart. Mary Jane has no particular motion picture favorite.
"I like 'em all" she said in answer to a question, "especially the men."
Mary Jane has an advantage over most child screen artists in that she is able to portray not only little girl roles but boy characters as well. She was the best boy obtainable for the role of Francois in "Cordelia the Magnificent."
Less than six months ago a tutor was secured for her and already she is studying fourth grade subjects.
She returned recently from the South Sea Islands where she appeared in "Lost and Found." She is the only youngster in motion pictures with a foreign tour to her credit. Among recent productions in which she has played are "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," with Elliott Dexter and Helen Jerome Eddy, "The Cradle" with Ethel Clayton, "The Top of New York" with May McAvoy and "The Little Church Around the Corner."

Included in the cast of "Cordelia the Magnificent" are Lewis Dayton, Huntly Gordon, Lloyd Whitlock, Jacqueline Garsdon, Carol Holloway, Katherine Murphy, Elinor Hancock and others. George Archinbaud directed the production.
"Cordelia the Magnificent" was written by Leroy Scott, a favorite fiction writer. It appeared serially in Hearts International. It was adapted for the screen by Frank S. Beresford. The photography was done by Charles Richardson. Joseph Wright was art director.
Japs Excel in Carving.
Japanese art is supreme in wood and ivory carving. Experts in such matters declare that there is nothing anywhere else that comes near what Japanese workmen can achieve. A specimen of ivory carving was shown to one investigator which represented a bag of rice with two or three dozen rats in and upon it. Every rat was an individual in character, position, and action, as if a special portrait had been taken of it, and the web of the bag, the glistening grains of rice and the sleek fur of the rodents could not have been better expressed in painting.
At an art store in Yokohama there was exhibited a piece of wood carving representing two life-sized wrestlers contending in the ring. Every muscle and every vein were delineated, every tendon and every ligament were anatomically perfect. It drew a constant crowd, and a policeman informed the proprietor of the shop that if he intended to continue the wrestling on his premises he must engage a posse of police to restrain the crowd. He was invited into the shop, and melted into smiles when he saw that the wrestlers were carvings in wood.
The Raconteur.
"Well—haw! haw!—sir," laughed Toke Sagg, "lemme tell you the funniest thing I ever heard of in all my life! Lank Lopstitch was riding along on horseback and lost his britches off. He—"
"Lost them off? In the name of gracious, how?" interrupted a motorist who had halted his car in the big road to inquire the way to Presbyterian hill.
"Aw, it don't make no pertickler difference how. The story is about what happened afterwards, and—"
"But, wait! How in the name of the everlasting Sam Patch can a man lose his trousers off when he is riding horseback?"
"Looky yur! If you don't want to hear this story, say so!"—Kansas City Star.

Place to Find Them.
"So this is Lethargy beach?" Inquired the looked-for traveler.
"Yes," was the reply.
"How long have you been here?" again the stranger asked.
"Six weeks."
"Then perhaps you can tell me where the startling bathing costumes are."
"Where they always are—on the screen. The picture theater is two blocks down the boardwalk."
Properties of Zinc.
Zinc is ductile between 212 and 302 degrees Fahrenheit, and can then be shaped as required. But when either above or below these limits it becomes brittle and unpliant, and therefore not adapted for treatment. It melts at about 785 degrees Fahrenheit if volatilization is guarded against.

THE BASELESS FEAR OF FINANCE'S POWER

By WALTER W. HEAD
President American Bankers Association.

We speak of "coal"; immediately we visualize a pile of black lumps. We speak of "wheat"; in our mind we picture a golden field of grain or perhaps the farmer's load en route to market.

Walter W. Head

Finance is not a commodity. Being an intangible thing, it is greatly misunderstood. It means one thing to some people, another to others. By reason of this mystery surrounding it, it is too frequently feared, and financiers assailed as enemies of the public good, using their power selfishly to advance their own purposes.

No nation or people ever achieved greatness without the assistance of finance,—accumulated capital, managed and directed by those skilled in the handling of wealth and money. Accumulated resources are represented at times by hoards of gold, but more frequently by ships, herds, and other productive agencies.

America measures her resources in terms of billions of dollars. She has thousands of prosperous homes, myriads of well developed villages and towns, thousands of miles of railroads and paved roads. This has been possible through the investment and use of capital or wealth created and accumulated by the citizens.

When the early pioneers first traveled over the prairies, which are now rich and productive fields, their resources consisted only of a productive soil, a healthful climate, and the sunshine and rain necessary to the growth of vegetation.

As the early settlers wrought and produced and prospered, they saved. These savings they invested in the tools of production—plows, harrows, binders, stores, railroads, banks and manufacturing enterprises. THESE SAVINGS "FINANCED" PROGRESS. The building of the railroads was the great outstanding contribution of finance to the development of the West. The West owes a debt of gratitude to the investors in eastern states who ventured to invest their money in virgin territory, making possible development by the use of their accumulated resources.

Bank deposits represent very largely the savings of the people. The loans they make possible are employed in productive enterprises. The development of the agricultural communities depends very largely upon the credits extended by investors in other communities. The development of municipalities is possible very largely through the sale of municipal bonds to investors in other places. All this is the work of finance.

WAGES HERE AND ABROAD

THE American factory worker is receiving wages the purchasing power of which is above the wages paid in any other country of the world. The British Ministry of Labor has made a computation of the amount of food which the wages of workers in different cities of the world will purchase. In the following table the purchasing power of wages in London is taken as 100, and the purchasing power of wages in other cities is shown as percentages of this figure. The table indicates that the worker in New York can buy more than twice as much food with his wages than can the worker in London, while the worker in Berlin or Vienna can buy only a little more than half as much with his daily wage as the worker in London, or only one-fourth as much as the worker in New York.

An important factor in the differences between the rewards of workers is that the productivity of the American worker has been greatly increased through the use of large investments of capital for machinery.—Journal of the American Bankers Association.

WHAT AGRICULTURE NEEDS

A recent summary of the agricultural situation grouped the needs as follows:

1. Increased and balanced production
2. Increased understanding of credit facilities
3. Increased market facilities
4. Better business methods

THE BASELESS FEAR OF FINANCE'S POWER

By WALTER W. HEAD
President American Bankers Association.

We speak of "coal"; immediately we visualize a pile of black lumps. We speak of "wheat"; in our mind we picture a golden field of grain or perhaps the farmer's load en route to market.

Walter W. Head

Finance is not a commodity. Being an intangible thing, it is greatly misunderstood. It means one thing to some people, another to others.

By reason of this mystery surrounding it, it is too frequently feared, and financiers assailed as enemies of the public good, using their power selfishly to advance their own purposes.

No nation or people ever achieved greatness without the assistance of finance—accumulated capital, managed and directed by those skilled in the handling of wealth and money. Accumulated resources are represented at times by hoards of gold, but more frequently by ships, herds, and other productive agencies.

America measures her resources in terms of billions of dollars. She has thousands of prosperous homes, myriads of well developed villages and towns, thousands of miles of railroads and paved roads. This has been possible through the investment and use of capital or wealth created and accumulated by the citizens.

When the early pioneers first traveled over the prairies, which are now rich and productive fields, their resources consisted only of a productive soil, a healthful climate, and the sunshine and rain necessary to the growth of vegetation.

As the early settlers wrought and produced and prospered, they saved. These savings they invested in the tools of production—plows, harrows, binders, stores, railroads, banks and manufacturing enterprises. THESE SAVINGS "FINANCED" PROGRESS. The building of the railroads was the great outstanding contribution of finance to the development of the West. The West owes a debt of gratitude to the investors in eastern states who ventured to invest their money in virgin territory, making possible development by the use of their accumulated resources.

Bank deposits represent very largely the savings of the people. The loans they make possible are employed in productive enterprises. The development of the agricultural communities depends very largely upon the credits extended by investors in other communities. The development of municipalities is possible very largely through the sale of municipal bonds to investors in other places. All this is the work of finance.

WAGES HERE AND ABROAD

THE American factory worker is receiving wages the purchasing power of which is above the wages paid in any other country of the world. The British Ministry of Labor has made a computation of the amount of food which the wages of workers in different cities of the world will purchase. In the following table the purchasing power of wages in London is taken as 100, and the purchasing power of wages in other cities is shown as percentages of this figure. The table indicates that the worker in New York can buy more than twice as much food with his wages than can the worker in London, while the worker in Berlin or Vienna can buy only a little more than half as much with his daily wage as the worker in London, or only one-fourth as much as the worker in New York.

New York	217
Ottawa	180
Amsterdam	103
London	100
Christiania	92
Stockholm	87
Warsaw	85
Brussels	70
Paris	68
Prague	67

Berlin	57

An important factor in the differences between the rewards of workers is that the productivity of the American worker has been greatly increased through the use of large investments of capital for machinery.—Journal of the American Bankers Association.

POLISH GENERAL'S WAR ADVENTURES

Joseph Haller Led Armies on Both Sides.

TELLS WHY HE QUIT AUSTRIA

Gen. Joseph Haller, military chief of the Polish army, who is now visiting the United States, told his own story of how he commanded armies on both sides in the World war.

It was a vivid recital of almost unbelievable adventure and achievement against overwhelming odds, a story that at the time was submerged by the greater drama of the war as a whole.

General Haller, at the beginning of the World war, was an officer in the Austro-Hungarian army, holding an important command on the Bessarabian front. Many of the men under him were Poles. It was his hope that out of the war a free Poland might arise—a hope that was encouraged by false promises from the Germans and Austrians.

German Duplicity Revealed.

To attain their coveted free land, General Haller and his men fought bravely against the Russians, but when the czar was overthrown and Russia became a republic, the general said he could see no reason for further war against the Slavs.

Shortly afterward the Kerensky government in Russia was overthrown by the Bolsheviks and the war on the east front collapsed. The treaty of Brest-Litovsk was signed and the Poles discovered that the promises of the Germans and Austrians had been partitioned again, Russia still retaining a slice.

Declared War on Germans.

It was then General Haller made his great decision. Although he had a force of only three thousand men, he declared war on Austria and Germany. He "camouflaged" his plan, to use his own expression, and issued an order for a night maneuver. The Austrian staff was aware of the order, however, and when General Haller started toward the Russian border, fighting broke out between his own troops and those at whose side they so recently had fought.

He won through finally, but lost his artillery and supply trains. He was out on a great desert virtually, a land that had been devastated by the movements of vast armies or was composed largely of swamps. But he went ahead. Reaching a town on the Dnieper river, he found himself surrounded by a force of fourteen thousand Germans. A battle followed and at the conclusion, which General Haller himself ordered, the Germans offered full honors of war if he would surrender. He refused and added a new wrinkle to military strategy—he dispersed his army.

"We could have gone on fighting," he said, "but there would only have been a few more dead Polish heroes and no Polish army."

He issued a proclamation to his men, telling them to scatter in small groups and assemble later when they heard from him.

Called on Poles to Fight.

General Haller effected his own escape and reached Moscow. Then he issued a proclamation that made him famous. It was addressed to "Polish soldiers, wherever they may be found" and called upon them to join him in a war to free Poland.

The immediate response was from Poles within Russia—who had fought either with the Russian or Austrian armies, the latter category having been made prisoners of war. With about four thousand men, General Haller proceeded to Murmansk, in the extreme north of Russia, where there was a small allied expedition. When he reached there, General Haller went to General Poore, commanding the British force, and offered his small army to aid the allies.

"But whom do you represent?" the British general asked.

"The independent republic of Poland," was the reply, and it was the first time in nearly six hundred years that a free Poland laid claim to recognition.

"I Am the Government."

"But where is your government?" was the next question.

"I am the government," General Haller replied.

"Where is your flag?"

"Here." And, reaching into his tunic, General Haller produced a small flag that had been made by some women in one of the villages in which he had stopped for a time.

The result was the signing of an agreement that gave Poland real hope for freedom and opportunity to aid in fighting for it. General Haller went to France, where he took command of twenty-five thousand Poles from America, who had volunteered when the call went forth, and formed two divisions, which received high praise from the allied commanders.

The armistice came—too soon for him, General Haller said, because he desired to carry the war from home to Germany and dictate terms from Berlin—and the Polish army marched across Germany to put into being that for which they had struggled for more than four years and to meet and hurl back the tide of bolshevism which threatened to engulf Europe in the summer of 1920.

Impressed by Visit.

General Haller has been greatly impressed by his visit to America. He praised the American military system,

Have Cheerful Living

Room; Not Overcrowded

In attempting to make a living-room attractive do not make a mistake by overdoing. We may pack our rooms with vivacious colors and bizarre ornaments, as well as with odd furniture, only to find that we have at the end less than nothing. Less than nothing because nothingness would seem desirable by contrast. Of course we can imagine that such a room might stimulate a family that is so sluggish in brain activity as to be in this direction markedly subnormal, but the effect on the average person would be decidedly one of aversion. The brightness of the average living-room should extend no farther than cheerfulness; its atmosphere should be one of repose rather than of excitement; it should not be stiff and formal, but it should have dignity with a homelike atmosphere. It should, in short, be a room where strangers, as well as the family, feel that they are in a place where there is kindness and good cheer, where there is sympathetic intelligence; where there is love of the beautiful rather than worship of the elegant; a place where one truly lives and needs not to make pretense of living.

No opening from a living-room adds quite so much of beauty, attractiveness and utility to it as do French windows and doors. This is particularly true of the doors. One pair of French doors in a room decorate it more than will several pieces of furniture. Much as we like French windows we must admit that they have one unfortunate side in a moderate or small-sized living-room and that is that they take much wall space that might be utilized for tables and chairs. Also, of course, drapes for such windows cost much more than for the regulation windows. Some people object to them for the reason that they think they are not so well protected from intrusion by burglars. But when one comes to that sort of thing he must remember that no door of any kind whatsoever is effectively closed to such visitors. In general we might just as well take our chances with one kind of an opening as with another. If more beauty and usefulness are attached to one than another that might just as well be our door or window.

Fashion News Notes

for Women Who Care

The tam-o'-shanter crown, so much a favorite, is inclining now to droop at the back instead of on the side. This brings a high, straight stiff band across the forehead, which is especially becoming to young and piquant faces.

Beige, rust and steel beads are effectively combined on a black velvet afternoon frock. The pattern is massed about the lower edge of the skirt in front, with a mere thread of the bead work at the waistline and on the sleeves.

To the black street costume, so greatly in vogue, there is a clever way of adding a bit of color. This is to intertwine a length of bright silk with the black girdle, and allow the bright silk ends to hang as panels on each side.

Lingerie of sheer linen is now being embroidered in black silk. The linen is usually in a delicate pastel shade, against which the embroidered edges and smart monogram show up well.

Roshanar, a crepe, has taken unto itself interesting patterns in chenille. The patterns in large, widely scattered squares and a rich spot of darker hue on the blues and browns.

Cafe au lait satin and flowered georgette are combined in producing a dinner frock of exquisite beauty.

We may pack our rooms with vivacious colors and bizarre ornaments, as well as with odd furniture, only to find that we have at the end less than nothing. Less than nothing because nothingness would seem desirable by contrast. Of course we can imagine that such a room might stimulate a family that is so sluggish in brain activity as to be in this direction markedly subnormal, but the effect on the average person would be decidedly one of aversion. The brightness of the average living-room should extend no farther than cheerfulness; its atmosphere should be one of repose rather than of excitement; it should not be stiff and formal, but it should have dignity with a homelike atmosphere. It should, in short, be a room where strangers, as well as the family, feel that they are in a place where there is kindness and good cheer, where there is sympathetic intelligence; where there is love of the beautiful rather than worship of the elegant; a place where one truly lives and needs not to make pretense of living.

No opening from a living-room adds quite so much of beauty, attractiveness and utility to it as do French windows and doors. This is particularly true of the doors. One pair of French doors in a room decorate it more than will several pieces of furniture. Much as we like French windows we must admit that they have one unfortunate side in a moderate or small-sized living-room and that is that they take much wall space that might be utilized for tables and chairs. Also, of course, drapes for such windows cost much more than for the regulation windows. Some people object to them for the reason that they think they are not so well protected from intrusion by burglars. But when one comes to that sort of thing he must remember that no door of any kind whatsoever is effectively closed to what visitors. In general we might just as well take our chances with one kind of an opening as with another. If more beauty and usefulness are attached to one than another that might just as well be our door or window.

Fashion News Notes for Women Who Care

The tam-o'-shanter crown, so much a favorite, is inclining now to droop at the back instead of on the side. This brings a high, straight stiff band across the forehead, which is especially becoming to young and pliant faces.

Beige, rust and steel beads are effectively combined on a black velvet afternoon frock. The pattern is massed about the lower edge of the skirt in front, with a mere thread of the bead work at the waistline and on the sleeves.

To the black street costume, so greatly in vogue, there is a clever way of adding a bit of color. This is to intertwine a length of bright silk with the black girdle, and allow the bright silk ends to hang as panels on each side.

Lingerie of sheer linen is now being embroidered in black silk. The linen is usually in a delicate pastel shade, against which the embroidered edges and smart monogram show up well.

Roshanar, a crepe, has taken unto itself interesting patterns in chenille. The patterns in large, widely scattered squares and a rich spot of darker hue on the blues and browns.

TURN IN THE ROAD

By EDITH LOCKETT HOSMER

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

DIANA EMERSON, with an impatient gesture, tossed on the floor the frayed silk hat that she was trying to recover with velvet. She had been resenting the necessity of this task even before Rena Crowell had dropped in for a moment. In every move of Rena's she had detected amusement, even ridicule—not in words, for there are means of expression more eloquent than mere words. It had begun when Diana's hand, discolored a little from much canning and housework, had met Rena's white, manicured hand in a clasp that was mere form. Then Rena had noticed the frayed silk heap that she must have remembered as Diana's "honeymoon hat," but Rena had inquired what Diana was trying to do with it.

"Oh, I like the shape," Diana had added, "so I'm trying to recover it with velvet."

"Oh, how clever!" Rena had cooed the words, but her tone meant, "Oh, how pitiful!"

Her hands had moved to her own expensive hat, which covered her perfectly groomed hair.

"Pretty little house," Rena had commented. Then, darlings, "You'll have room for quite a family."

"I hope so," Diana's reply had been simple.

"Well, one hasn't time for everything," the guest persisted. "I'd hate to be tied down. Oh, my, I've got to run—going to a bridge party, you know."

Rena was gone, a faint scent of her heavy perfume lingering in the room. The hat, the despised, frayed silk hat, lay in a little heap on the floor.

"It isn't fair! It isn't fair!" exclaimed Diana, hotly. "Why should I go without things?" She picked up the offending object and bent it as much out of shape as she could.

"Now, I'll have to have another. I'll tell Bill I'll have to have a new one."

They had done nothing but scrimp and save since they had been married. Of course, they were buying their own home, and doing well with the payments, too; but it certainly was hard to curb her desires for beautiful things, when she wanted them now while she was young. She couldn't understand how Rena and Dick could have so many things, for Dick's salary could not be very much greater, as he and Bill worked for the same firm, though in different branches.

Diana smiled a bitter little smile as she picked up the hat from the floor. She would put it on just as it was now and make fun of it to Bill. Bill would then tell her to go ahead and buy up the town. Rena was living and she, Diana, meant to live, too. From now on she was going to hold out her hand to take things, beg for things, get things.

The door opened again, but very slowly and Bill came in. He was not smiling his usual smile—he was white and haggard looking.

"Oh, Bill!" she ran to him—"oh, Bill, you're sick."

He did not speak, only shook his head, then fumbled in his pockets and handed her a letter. It was crumpled, as if he had read it over and over.

"Dear Sir: We are not pleased with recent reports from you, and regret to inform you that after the first of the year your services will no longer be required, as we feel that it will not be hard to find a man who will represent us better. Our Mr. Tildren will be at your office in a day or two if there is anything you wish to inquire about."

It was signed personally by the head of the firm.

For a moment, but only for a moment, a feeling swept over Diana—a feeling that she had married a weakling, a failure. She looked at Bill and saw great tears in his eyes.

"It hurts when you've done your best!" His young lips trembled.

Diana watched those tears. She thought it so pitiful to see a man weep.

She must not let the tears flow. Her hands—hands that only a few moments before had been ready to take—reached out now to her husband to give of her love, her faith, her loyalty. Her arms wound themselves about his neck and she drew his face down to hers.

"There must be some mistake," she suggested. "Oh, Bill, don't worry. You're young, and you've got me," she finished gayly.

All the years that followed held no sweeter moment than this.

Of course it was a mistake, the mistake of a new clerk at headquarters, who was unfamiliar with the branch offices. But "our Mr. Tildren" soon made it plain that Dick should have received that letter, and before he left he convinced Bill that the firm intended to give him a substantial raise.

It was hard for Bill to believe at first, but he went flying home to Diana with the news. He took her in his arms, hugged her till her breath was gone. He was wondering if Rena would stand by Dick as his wife had stood by him.

"Make a wish, honey," Bill exclaimed, "what do you want?"

Somewhere in the house was a frayed silk hat, but Diana, glowing with happiness, never even thought of it—for this was living.

"I want just you," she sighed contentedly, for a real understanding of values had dawned upon her; and, after all, she was hardly sorry for the clerk's mistake, because it had brought her to a turn in the road, and now the way ahead looked good.

As to the True Black Fox.

The true black fox is black all over with the exception of the tip of the tail which is white, but I will say that these animals are very rare indeed, says a writer in the Sportsman's Digest. The silver, or silver gray, is practically the same color save that the back and shoulders are shot with more or less gray hairs; the less light hairs there are the more valuable the pelt. Foxes that have a very small amount of these gray hairs are classed as black. The cross fox is a mixture of the dark fox and the ordinary red one, rusty-colored patches being visible at different points, especially on the shoulders and rump. As in the case of the silver, the more black on the cross fox the greater his value.

Flirting With Fame.

"Why do you insist on nibbling around that hook?" said the wise fish.

"You realize the danger."

"Yes," replied the little fellow, "but we all have a certain appetite for glory. I am willing to take a chance for the sake of being described to that man's friends as the big fish that got away."—Washington Star.

Bees Do Not Sting Skunks.
That skunks will eat bees is the testimony of E. L. Denslow of Conneaut township. He came upon one in the act of moving his hives enough to bring out the bees, and when they came out the skunk ate them. Denslow fired at the animal but missed. Later the skunk came back and repeated the performance, again getting away.

Little Law in Albania.
Except in a few communities in the South, the Albanians live in tribal organizations, in scattered communities in the mountains, where each man defends his home and his rights with his rifle, which he never lays down when out of doors. They are governed by a sort of common law, which is known as the Law of Lek. Lek was a more or less traditional law giver of the once powerful family of Dukadajini.

ORDINANCE NO 465.
An ordinance to issue and sell bonds of the City of Circleville, Ohio, for the purpose of remodeling, repairing and re-roofing, with suitable materials, for office purposes and other proper or required needs, of a part or all of the City Building of Circleville, Ohio.

Whereas, the Council of the City of Circleville, State of Ohio, has requested the City Auditor to issue his certificate as to the estimated life of the improvement proposed to be constructed with the proceeds hereinafter referred to, and the City Auditor has certified to this Council such estimated life to be twenty-five years and has further certified the maximum maturity of such bonds as 25 years; and

Whereas, this Council estimates that a tax for said bonds will first appear upon the duplicate for the tax year 1925, and that the final tax settlement with the County Treasurer next following the inclusion of a tax for this issue of bonds in the annual budget by the County Auditor, as provided by law, will be obtained not earlier than September 1, 1925, and will require $412.50 until such taxes are collected and available, which interest is included in this bond issue. (This ordinance is prepared under the G. C. of Ohio, and especially Sect. 3939.)

Now, therefore, be it ordained by the Council of the City of Circleville, State of Ohio, two-thirds of all the members elected thereto concurring, Section 1. That for the purpose of raising money to remodel and improve the City Building of the City of Circleville, State of Ohio, or any part or parts of it as above recited, with the required, suitable materials, it is hereby declared to be necessary to issue and sell, bonds of the City of Circleville, State of Ohio, in the sum of Seven thousand Five Hundred ($7500.00) Dollars for the aforesaid purpose. The aforesaid improvement or improvements are to be made in compliance with the plans, specifications, profiles and estimates prepared by the City Engineer and Lum, a firm of Architects, of Columbus, Ohio, and have been examined carefully by Council and found satisfactory, accepted, approved and placed on file in the office of the Director of Public Service for public inspection. Section 2. That bonds of the City of Circleville, Ohio, shall be issued in the principal sum of $7500.00 for the purpose aforesaid. Said bonds shall be numbered from one to fifteen, both inclusive; and shall also be serially numbered from one to fifteen, both inclusive; each of said bonds shall be of the denomination of $500.00. Said bonds shall be dated December 1, 1925, and shall bear interest at the rate of five and one-half per cent, per annum, and the first interest shall become due and payable on the first day of September, 1924, and semi-annually of each year thereafter on the first day of March and September, until the principal sum is paid. Said bonds shall mature as follows: Bond No. 1, $500.00 September 1, 1925; Bond No. 2, $500.00 September 1, 1926; Bond No. 3, $500.00 September 1, 1927; Bond No. 4, $500.00 September 1, 1928; Bond No. 5, $500.00 September 1, 1929; Bond No. 6, $500.00 September 1, 1930; Bond No. 7, $500.00 September 1, 1931; Bond No. 8, $500.00 September 1, 1932; Bond No. 9, $500.00 September 1, 1933; Bond No. 10, $500.00 September 1, 1934; Bond No. 11, $500.00 September 1, 1935; Bond No. 12, $500.00 September 1, 1936; Bond No. 13, $500.00 September 1, 1937; Bond No. 14, $500.00 September 1, 1938; Bond No. 15, $500.00 September 1, 1939; which maturities are hereby determined by Council to be in practical and substantial equal installments. The principal and interest of all of said bonds shall be payable at the office of the Treasurer of the City of Circleville, Ohio.

Section 3. That said bonds shall express upon their face the purpose for which they are issued; that they are issued in pursuance of this ordinance and shall be signed by the Mayor and attested and sealed with the corporate seal of said City. The interest coupons attached to said bonds shall bear the fac simile signature of the City Auditor.

Section 4. That for the purpose of providing funds to pay the necessary interest on the foregoing issue of bonds promptly when and as the same falls due and also to provide a fund sufficient to discharge the said serial bonds at maturity, there shall be, and hereby is levied on all the taxable property in said City of Circleville, Ohio, in addition to all other taxes, a direct tax annually during the period said bonds are to run in an amount sufficient to provide a fund for the discharge of the interest upon said bonds and when the same become due, and also to provide a fund for the discharge of the principal of said serial bonds at maturity, which shall not be less than the interest and sinking fund tax levied in said City of Circleville, Ohio, by the City Auditor, and shall be levied in the same manner and at the same time that taxes for general purposes for each of said years are levied, extended and collected. Said tax shall be paid before and in full, and in addition to all other items and for the full amount thereof. The funds derived from said tax levies hereby required shall be placed in a separate and distinct fund, which together with all interest on the same shall be irrevocably pledged for the payment of the interest and principal of said bonds when and as the same fall due.

Section 5. Said bonds shall be offered for sale and sold in the manner provided by law under the direction of the Finance Committee and the Auditor, but not for less than their par value and accrued interest thereon; the proceeds from the sale of said bonds, except the premium and accrued interest thereon, and the amount of said bonds issued for interest shall be used for the purpose aforesaid, and for no other purpose; the premium and accrued interest received from such sale, and the amount of said bonds issued for interest shall be transferred to the trustees of the sinking fund to be held by them in the manner provided by law.

Section 6. The City Auditor is hereby directed to forward a certified copy of this ordinance to the County Auditor as required by Section 5649-1b of the General Code of Ohio.

Section 7. That this ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after the earliest period allowed by law.

Destruction of Cathedral Led to Great Changes.

Architect's Work in Restoring Church Left Scarcely a Trace of Ancient English Architectural Style.

"Will the destruction by fire during the last year of the three oldest Catholic churches in Canada, St. Anne de Beau Pre, the Trappist monastery at Oka, and the Basilica at Quebec, have as much influence on the architecture of present-day Canada as the burning of an English cathedral once had in England?" asks Horace B. Cheney in Cheney's Style Service.

"How the destruction of a single building can influence a nation's architecture is a fact attested by history; and the Canterbury cathedral fire in 1174 provided a notable instance.

"Hopelessly defaced by this great conflagration, the cathedral presented an important problem to rebuilding skill, and William of Sens, a French architect, was invited to England, that he might reconstruct the beauty destroyed. His hand sowed, then, in Britain a seed whose harvest spread so greatly that, toward the close of the Thirteenth century scarcely a trace of ancient English architectural style maintained itself in England.

"French forms had become dominant. Thenceforward, for a space in both countries, the early pointed arch developed into the geometrical style, and this in turn to the later decorated style. And France it was who always led the way—a fact clearly illustrated by the choir and transepts of Le Mans cathedral (1217-1254), the choir of Amiens cathedral (1244-1288), the choir of Beauvais (1225-1270)—these all being of earlier period than English buildings of corresponding style and undoubtedly influencing them.

"In 1338 occurred yet another determinant of architectural change. The Hundred Year's war was ushered in and England's troops, led by their sovereign, Edward Plantagenet, third of his name, invaded France. Now this invasion unquestionably had—through the impressions formed in minds of king and followers—noticeable reactions upon England's structures. And these impressions were to bear fruit, to quote a single instance, in the chapel in the palace of Westminster—the magnificent conclusion of which the St. Chapelle of Paris inspired Edward to accomplish.

Whereas, during the months of July, August, September and October, 1923, he was paid $60.00 per month by the State of Ohio, for his loss of salary while so disabled; and Whereas, there yet remains unpaid to him for the loss of said services the sum of $30.00 per month for each one of said four months, making a total sum of $120.00 for said loss of services so unpaid; and

Whereas, it is the judgment of Council that said balance should be paid by the City of Circleville, Ohio.

Therefore, be it resolved by the Council of Circleville, Ohio, Section 1. That the City Auditor be and he is hereby authorized and empowered to draw voucher payable to the order of said William McCrady for the sum of $120.00 in payment in full of said balance on any available fund which he may have at his disposal for such a purpose.

Intelligent and Grateful Mare.
A miner near Lucerne, B. C., returning home from work was seized by the shoulder by a mare, which had trotted after him. Having attracted the man's attention the animal went back a short distance and waited. When the man went on, the horse again followed him and the miner then realized that something was wrong. He followed the animal to a pond and there found a foal fast in the slime. When he had rescued the foal, the mare showed her appreciation by putting her nose in the man's face.

More Than He Could Endure.
Recently a tramp, taken up in a New York police court for drunkenness, gave his birthplace as Boston.

"Yours," said the magistrate, "is a sad case. Yet you don't seem to thoroughly realize how low you have sunk."

The prisoner struck his brow with a pained gesture. "Heavens!" he exclaimed devoutly, "I have stood many indignities, but to be sentenced by a magistrate that splits his infinitives! This is the last blow!"

Compensation in Age.
It is true that a poet wrote a famous hymn, "I Would Not Live Always," yet people are interested in living as long as they can, as that is one of the great laws of nature. Even advanced age, bringing dim sight, loss of hearing and general decline, is not without its compensations, and Longfellow proved that "age is opportunity no less than youth."

Bees Do Not Sting Skunks.
That skunks will eat bees is the testimony of E. L. Denslow of Conneaut township. He came upon one in the act of moving his hives enough to bring out the bees, and when they came out the skunk ate them. Denslow fired at the animal but missed. Later the skunk came back and repeated the performance, again getting away.

Little Law in Albania.

Except in a few communities in the South, the Albanians live in tribal organizations, in scattered communities in the mountains, where each man defends his home and his rights with his rifle, which he never lays down when out of doors. They are governed by a sort of common law, which is known as the Law of Lek. Lek was a more or less traditional law given by the once powerful family of Dukadjin.

ORDINANCE NO 465.

An ordinance to issue and sell bonds of the City of Circleville, Ohio, for the purpose of remodeling, repairing and re-roofing, with suitable materials, for office purposes and other proper or required needs, of a part or all of the City Building of Circleville, Ohio.

Whereas, the Council of the City of Circleville, Ohio, has requested the City Auditor to issue his certificate as to the estimated life of the improvement proposed to be constructed with the proceeds hereinafter referred to, and the City Auditor has certified to this Council such estimated life to be twenty-five years and has further certified the maximum maturity of such bonds as 25 years; and

Whereas, this Council estimates that a tax for said bonds will first appear upon the duplicate for the tax year 1925, and that the final tax settlement with the County Treasurer next following the inclusion of a tax for this issue of bonds in the annual budget by the County Auditor, as provided by law, will be obtained not earlier than September 1, 1925, and will require $412.50 until such taxes are collected and available, which interest is included in this bond issue. (This ordinance is under the G. C. of Ohio, and especially Sect. 3939.)

Now, therefore, be it ordained by the Council of the City of Circleville, State of Ohio, two-thirds of all the members elected thereto concurring.

Section 1. That for the purpose of raising money to remodel and improve the City Building of the City of Circleville, State of Ohio, or any part or parts of it as above recited, with the required, suitable materials, it is hereby declared to be necessary to issue and sell, and there shall be issued and sold, bonds of the City of Circleville, State of Ohio, in the sum of Seven thousand Five Hundred ($7500.00) Dollars for the aforesaid purpose. The aforesaid improvement or improvements are to be made in compliance with the plans, specifications, profiles and estimates prepared by Straining and Lum, a firm of Architects, of Columbus, Ohio, and have been examined carefully by Council and found satisfactory, accepted, approved and placed on file in the office of the Director of Public Service for public inspection.

Section 2. That bonds of the City of Circleville, Ohio, shall be issued in the principal sum of $7500.00 for the purpose aforesaid. Said bonds shall be numbered from one to fifteen, both inclusive; and shall also be serially numbered from one to fifteen, both inclusive, each of said bonds from 1 to 15 both inclusive shall be of the denomination of $500.00. Said bonds shall be dated December 1, 1925, and shall bear interest at the rate of five and one-half per cent, per annum, and the first interest shall become due and payable on the first day of September, 1924, and semi-annually of each year thereafter on the first day of March and September, until the principal sum is paid. Said bonds shall mature as follows: Bond No. 1, $500.00 September 1, 1925; Bond No. 2, $500.00 September 1, 1926; Bond No. 3, $500.00 September 1, 1927; Bond No. 4, $500.00 September 1, 1928; Bond No. 5, $500.00 September 1, 1929; Bond No. 6, $500.00 September 1, 1930; Bond No. 7, $500.00 September 1, 1931; Bond No. 8, $500.00 September 1, 1932; Bond No. 9, $500.00 September 1, 1933; Bond No. 10, $500.00 September 1, 1934; Bond No. 11, $500.00 September 1, 1935; Bond No. 12, $500.00 September 1, 1936; Bond No. 13, $500.00 September 1, 1937; Bond No. 14, $500.00 September 1, 1938; Bond No. 15, $500.00 September 1, 1939; which maturities are hereby determined by Council to be in practically substantial equal installments. The principal and interest of all of said bonds shall be payable at the office of the Treasurer of the City of Circleville, Ohio.

Section 3. That said bonds shall express upon their face the purpose for which they are issued; that they are issued in pursuance of this ordinance and shall be signed by the Mayor and attested and sealed with the corporate seal of said City. The interest coupons attached to said bonds shall bear the fac simile signature of the City Auditor.

Section 4. That for the purpose of providing funds to pay the necessary interest on the foregoing issue of bonds promptly when and as the same falls due and also to provide a fund sufficient to discharge the said serial bonds at maturity, there shall be, and is hereby levied on all the taxable property in said City of Circleville, Ohio, in addition to all other taxes a direct tax annually during the period said bonds are to run in an amount sufficient to provide a fund for the discharge of the interest upon said bonds, and when the same become due, and also to provide a fund for the discharge of the principal of said serial bonds at maturity, which shall not be less than the interest and sinking fund tax required by Section Two of Article XIII of the Constitution. Said tax shall be and is hereby ordered computed, levied, levied and extended upon the tax duplicate and collected by the same officers in the same manner and at the same time that taxes for general purposes for each of said years are certified, extended and collected. Said tax shall be placed before and in preference to all other items and for the full amount thereof. The funds derived from said tax levies hereby required shall be placed in a separate and distinct fund, which together with all interest on the same shall be irrevocably pledged for the payment of the interest and principal of said bonds when and as the same fall due.

Section 5. Said bonds shall be offered for sale and sold in the manner provided by law under the direction of the Finance Committee and the Auditor, but not for less than their par value and accrued interest thereon. The proceeds from the sale of said bonds, except the premium and accrued interest thereon, and the amount of said bonds issued for interest shall be used for the purpose aforesaid, and for no other purpose; the premium and accrued interest received from such sale and the amount of said bonds issued for interest shall be transferred to the trustees of the sinking fund to be paid by them in the manner provided by law.

Section 6. The City Auditor is hereby directed to forward a certified copy of this ordinance to the County Auditor as required by Section 5646-1b of the General Code of Ohio.

Section 7. That this ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after the earliest period allowed by law.

BASKETBALL

C. A. C. Loses to Westerville by the Score of 14 to 8.

Spilling a good start by a poor finish the local quintet lost its basket ball game to Westerville Thursday night.

Altho the C. A. C. led the visitors by a 14 to 8 score at the half, Westerville came back strong while the locals apparently weakened which resulted in defeat.

No one could ask for a better game than was portrayed in the first half with both teams playing A-1 basket ball. But this cannot be said of the latter part of the game. The locals not only lacked its usual punch but had all the bad breaks of the game.

The predominating feature of the game was the small attendance and it is hoped that the public will give the team better support in the future as this is the one thing that will instill a greater fighting spirit in the team.

The score follows:

A PLAYTHING.

From the number of false fire alarms turned in recently, it is apparent that we are making a plaything of the fire alarm system. Someone turned in alarm 12 at 8:45 last night calling out the fire department. The only thing that could be called an excuse for turning this alarm was the burning of a cross in front of the court house.

It is a rather serious matter for a person who feels the need of glasses to put off from day to day visiting an optometric specialist who will prescribe correctly for them. We can tell all about your eye wants after a thorough investigation and can assure you that the lenses we will furnish you will exactly meet your visual requirements. Now don't hesitate—Come in and see us.
